DAMAGE SUIT BEFORE JURY

TESTIMONY GIVEN IN KNOX-BROWN AUTO CRASH CASE.

TOURIST PARK SCENE

Two Divorces Granted.—Burlington Junction Man Sentenced to Ninety Days in Jail.

The collision of two automobiles last February was the basis for a damage suit in circuit court today, the first jury case to be tried in the January term of the court.

Theodore ("Bud") Knox was claiming damages from George Brown.

The opening statements of counsel and of Edward Brush, the first witness, brought out the facts that Brush, a student at the State Teachers College, whose home is Stanberry, was driving an automobile, the property of Mr. Knox, proprietor of a restaurant and taxi business here, and that it collided head-on with a car driven by Robert Brown, son of George E. Brown, superintendent of the county farm, at a turn in the road in the College park.

Returning From Debate.

Brush testified that he, with Charles Heryford, a son of Dr. W. B. Heryford, was returning from Burlington Junction, where they had been to attend a debate. Charles Heryford was unable to testify in court, as he is attending school in Chicago.

They were driving through the park to get some of their books at the College, Brush said, when the two cars came in contact at the corner, about an eighth of a mile west of the College administration building. Robert Brown and his sister were returning to their home, west of Maryville, from the College, where they also were students.

Further testimony and summation was expected to prove who was in the wrong in the collision. Brush said on the stand that both cars were traveling at a moderate rate of speed, perhaps fifteen miles an hour.

The jury impanelled in the Knox-Brown case:

Roy Davis, S. P. Merriner, W. S. Ellsworth, A. S. Loomis, Ray Miller, B. M. Chandler, Ova Clayton, Ed Cliser-S. J. Schrader, Glenn Byergo, O. B. Humphrey, J. E. Cotrell.

Mash Charges Dismissed.

The prosecuting attorney dismissed the charge of making mash against Chester Palson and W. H. Wilfong.

Delmar Mammock, of Burlington Junction, charged with possession of liquor, yesterday pleaded guilty. He was fined $200 and sentenced to ninety days in the county jail.

Albert Johnson of Burlington Junction, whose parole was revoked, appeared before the court, paid $150 of a $200 fine and was released. He had been found guilty on a charge of possession of liquor and was paroled previously upon payment of $50 of the fine.

The jury was waived and judgment ordered by court for plaintiff in the note case of Bank of Hopkins against Ella D. Godsey. The Bank was awarded $171.10 and attorney fees of $17 on the first count; $1,395.31 and attorney fees of $139 on the second count; and $1,566.41 and attorney fees of $156 on the third count.

Another Judgment Given.

The Bank of Hopkins was also awarded judgment of $559.87 and attorney fees of $55 in the suit on note against Curtis Hodges.

A decree for partition by sale of lands in the partition suit of Miranda Lewis, et at, against William A. Wood, et al, was granted. Warren W. West and Oscar L. Mutti each defaulted and a decree of partition by sale of lands was granted in the partition suit of Bertha Ulmer, et al, against Lester O. West, et al.

An appeal case of Frank Ulmer against Ernest Shapley was continued. The note case of Olevia Paris against J. F. Minard was continued. The garnishment suit of Mrs. Douglas Hayes against Virgil H. Million, defendant, and Charles Million, garnishee, was continued.

Maintenance of children suit brought by Edith Warren against S. J. Warren, continued.

Two More Divorces.

Two more divorces were granted by the court yesterday. Faye A. Blacketer was awarded a decree from Cleo M. Blacketer and judgment of $200 gross alimony and $30 a month, payable monthly, starting January 1, for the

Profit in Feeding of Heavy Cattle

Ret Corrough, Near Arkoe, Buys 20 Head at $7.55 in July, Sells in Chicago This Week at $11.

Believing that the feeding of heavy cattle would bring as much or more profit than light weight beeves, Ret Corrough, farmer who lives one mile northeast of Arkoe, bought twenty head of White faces at St. Joseph last July for $7.55 a hundred weight.

Monday he shipped them to Chicago and today received notice his cattle brought 11 cents a pound. When weighed on the Chicago scales his white faces averaged 1,347 pounds.

Mr. Corrough said today this sale justified his belief and that he will continue in the business of feeding heavier weight cattle.

HOG MEETING DRAWS CROWD

LIVESTOCK SPECIALIST GIVES TWO TALKS.

DISCUSSES FEEDING

Session Holds Late As Farmers Hear Plans For More Economic Production in County.

The office of J. Ross Fleetwood, county agricultural agent, was filled at both the morning and afternoon meetings held here today, when J. W. Burch, livestock extension specialist of the University of Missouri, talked on hogs. The morning discussion was given over to feeding, while the afternoon talk was on production and the raising of worm-free pigs.

The purpose of the meeting was to work out some plan of carrying on more economic hog production in Nodaway County. Representatives from all school districts in the county were asked to attend the meeting.

Among the points brought out for discussion by Mr. Burch on feeding was that, "by feeding corn and a mixture of tankage, oil meal and ground alfalfa hay, fall pigs make as cheap and rapid gain as spring pigs."

"The average of several demonstrations," he said, "shows that either spring or fall pigs can be made to make 100 pounds of gain on 6 bushels of corn and from 20 to 30 pounds of mixture, tankage, oil meal and alfalfa, (2 parts tankage, 1 part oil meal, 1 part alfalfa meal)".

The meeting was in session until late today and methods for carrying on more economic hog production in the county was to be discussed later.

Five books received on a back order were put on the shelves of the Maryville Public Library today by Miss Grace Langan, librarian. Miss Langan said that the book committee, composed of Prof. C. A. Hawkins, C. E. Wells, College librarian, and L. E. Ziegler ,superintendent of schools, will meet with her this week to decide on the selection of a list of new books.

The books placed on the shelves today:

"The Black Knight," by Ethel M. Dell, copyright in 1927, a late fiction. Ethel Dell is author of "Hundredth Chance' and "Bars of Iron."

"Medusa's Head," by Josephine Daskam, copyrighted in 1923.

"The Training of Children in Religion," by George Hodges, copyrighted in 1911. Hodges' book was purchased upon the recommendation of the Parent-Teachers' Association. He is dean of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass.

"The Golden Scarecrow," by Hugh Walpole, copyrighted in 1915. Walpole is author of "The Cathedral."

"Fortune Telling and Character Reading," by Gabrielle Rosiere, published first in 1923. The book also was secured on request of library patrons. Included in the work are explanations of palmistry, revelation to number and tea leaf symbols.

Organ Recital Is Decided Success

The recital given by Charles Leech Gulick, concert organist, at the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, last night was an outstanding success. Mr. Gulick is a concert artist of note and captivated his audience with his first number and held its close attention throughout the program. As a demonstration of his ability the program was well arranged. He brought out every phase of the new memorial organ.

The program which Mr. Gulick presented here will be given over WGN, Chicago Tribune, January 16.

Tarkio Man Arrested on Bad Check Charge

F. E. Mutchler of Tarkio today was arrested by Sheriff L. B. Campbell on a bad check charge.

He is alleged to have issued a bogus check for $10 to George Craig.

W. A. Chapman, assistant cashier of the Sheridan bank, has entered a hospital in St. Joseph for an appendicitis operation.

Cables to London Can Be Sent From Maryville for $1.80

"With all this talk about telephoning to London at $25 per minute, I wonder how many people know they can send a 20-word cable to London for $1.80 from Maryville," said C. W. Payne, manager of the local Western Union office today.

In 1866 the cost of sending 20 words was $100. In 1875 the same number could be sent for $10, and now the rate is $1.80.

"Decreasing cable rates are bringing Europe closer to America," the manager said. "Fast ships, telegraph lines and the radio are putting the old and new worlds in closer touch than were cities in the United States not long ago."

YOUTH FACES FIGHT CHARGE

JESSE JOY, DRAKE STUDENT, ARRESTED AT DES MOINES.

HOME AT RAVENWOOD

Dispute Over Girl Said to Have Caused Alleged Attack on Fellow Student.

Special to Democrat-Forum.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 12.—Accused of badly battering a fellow student on the Drake University campus, Jesse Joy, 22, of Ravenwood, Mo., is at liberty on bond of $500, pending a hearing January 17 on charges of assault.

Joy is charged with knocking Lloyd H. Boettcher of Des Moines to the ground, using a stone as a weapon, and with kicking him in the head. Joy is alleged to have resented Boettcher's attentions to a Drake coed, with whom it is said Joy has been seen on numerous occasions.

The Ravenwood youth, who is part Indian, is a freshman at Drake. He attracted much attention on the campus this fall by his aversion to shoes, running barefooted in his track workouts at the Drake stadium, where he is employed outside of school hours.

Spring Is Not Here; Cold Wave on Way

Temperature Will Fall To 10 Above And Perhaps Lower, Says Warning Received Today.

It was too good to last!

The spring-like weather in which Nodaway County has been basking for several weeks is about to end, according to a warning received today by J. R. Brink, official weather observer, from the United States regional forecaster at Chicago.

"Cold wave Northwest Missouri tonight. Temperature 10 above or lower," the telegram read.

As a result, those who were seriously considering laying away the red flannels, and golfers and fishermen who were bringing their equipment out of hiding, have turned to a search for more "heavies," car muffs and similar cold resisters.

'NOT GUILTY', SAYS LANDIS

COMMISSIONER CLEARS ACCUSED BASEBALL PLAYERS.

GAMES NOT "THROWN"

Money Collected By Chicago Club Was Gift To Detroit For Beating Boston, It Is Ruled.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Twenty-one baseball players accused of graft in connection with a series of games between Chicago and Detroit in 1917 were found not guilty today by Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball.

Judge Landis' decision handed out after careful consideration of evidence presented by the two accusing ball players, Charles ("Swede") Risberg, and Arnold ("Chick") Gandil, and some thirty-one other players, who denied the charges was given out in his office, as promised, shortly before 10 a. m. today.

"It is the finding of the commissioner," Judge Landis' report said, "that the fund raised by the Chicago players about September 28, 1917, was not collected or paid to the Detroit players for 'sloughing'' to Chicago the game of September 2 and 3, 1917, but was paid because of Detroit's beating Boston, that there was no 'sloughing' of the September 2 or 3 games in 1917, nor or the September 26, 27 and 28 games in 1919, except possibly by Risberg and Gandil."

Three Now Managers.

Three managers are among the twenty-one players. Ray Schald of the White Sox, Donie Bush of the Pittsburgh Pirates, and John Collins of the Des Moines Western League. Clarence Rowland, manager of the White Sox in 1917, is now an American League umpire. The other still active members of the Detroit and Chicago clubs in 1917, involved in the charges of Swede Risberg and Chick Gandil, are:

Eddie Collins, Philadelphia Athletics.

Kid Gleason, coach Philadelphia Athletics.

Howard Ehmke, Philadelphia Athletics.

Red Faber, Chicago White Sox.

Immediately after surrendering—and without making a statement to officials—he was released on $50,000 bond. There is no charge against him other than a general order for his arrest, made by the circuit attorney.

UNION DEMAND TURNED DOWN

HOUSE REFUSES TO DENY 'OPEN' SHOPS PRINTING.

NO MORE EMBOSSING

Legislature Decides Against "Fancy" Stationery—Senate Appointments Tomorrow.

Jefferson City, Jan. 12.—The House of Representatives today rejected a proposal that the printing of stationery and supplies for that branch of the legislature be done in union shops.

A resolution had been introduced by Representative O. J. Page, Republican floor leader, providing that stationery for members of the house be printed instead of embossed. Mr. Page pointed out this would result in a material saving in the printing bill.

Representative H. C. Asel of Cole County, introduced an amendment specifying that the committee on printing award contracts only to establishments employing union labor. The amendment was assailed by Representative William E. Freeland of Taney County on the grounds that it was class legislation and would prohibit many printing companies from submitting bids.

After twenty minutes of wrangling and discussion the house voted down the amendment but adopted the resolution calling for printed stationery.

In the senate it was announced committee appointments would be read tomorrow morning. Senator William E. Painter of Carrollton, majority leader, said the committee on rules had about completed its work and would be ready to make its report tomorrow in order that committee appointments could be announced.

Senator William M. Bates, Republican, St. Louis, appeared in the Senate for the first time today and was administered the oath of office by Lieutenant Governor Phil Bennett. Senator Bates was ill at his home in St. Louis when the assembly convened last week.

Peking, Jan. 12.—Chinese soldiers have occupied the American missionary building at Fuchow, according to word received here today from the United States consul.

The situation atShaowu, 145 miles northwest of Fuchow, is becoming critical, according to the consul, who said that the lives of all missionaries were in danger because of the activities of soldiers and bandits.

Instructions have been issued to all American missionaries in Fuchow and Shaowu to be in readiness for instant evacuation ,the consul reported.

British to Demand Concessions.

Hankow, China, Jan. 12.—Counsellor O'Malley of the British legation at Peking has arrived here to demand return of the British concession to British control.

The destroyers Wishart and Verity also have arrived and today were anchored off the Bund.

A proclamation of the nationalist government forbade anti-British or anti-Christian agitation during O'Malley's stay here and said offenders would be regarded as having committed treason.

Carl Wray, Ollie Byergo, Vernon Leader and D. L. Joslin of Guilford were in Maryville today on business.

U. S. MARINES FOIL ATTACK

CITY IN INTERIOR NICARAGUA SAVED BY TIMELY AID.

MEXICO MAKES REPLY

Difficulties Due to "Foes," Says Conciliatory Answer to Coolidge Message.

Washington, Jan. 12.—A direct charge that bolshevists were undertaking "the destruction of what they term American imperialism" in Mexico and Latin America was made by Secretary of State Kellogg in a statement submitted to the Senate foreign relations committee today.

The "bolshevik leaders have had very definite ideas with respect to the role which Mexico and Latin America are to play in their general program of revolution," Kellogg said.

Managua, Jan. 12.—Timely arrival of 300 United States marines at Rama, on the Esconida river in the interior of Nicaragua, has saved the town from attack by liberal forces fighting to replace the conservative President Diaz by the liberal claimant, Juan Sacasa.

The marines were dispatched from Bluefields, on the east coast, where there now has been established a considerable United States fleet.

A United States navy transport, a gunboat and several destroyers today comprised the American naval force at Bluefields. Reports from Rama said the population rejoiced at the appearance of the marines, who were sent inland after President Diaz several times reiterated his inability to defend the city from the liberals.

Mexico City, Jan. 12.—Mexico today awaited the reply of the United States to Foreign Minister Saenz' denial of President Coolidge's charges that Mexico had interfered in Nicaraguan affairs.

His statement, conciliatory in tone and blaming foes of the Mexican government for the critical relations between the two countries, was the first official response here to Mr. Coolidge's message to Congress.

Charging that "hostile elements to the Mexican government are trying to create a serious antagonism between both countries," Senor Saenz said his country intended to violate no legitimately acquired right.

The next move, therefore, it was felt here, must come from Washington.

Death Sentence Is Given Slayer of Nine

George J. Hassel Shows No Emotion As Jury Returns Verdict In Early Morning.

Farwell, Tex., Jan 12.—George J. Hassel, slayer of his family of nine, sat in a hostile courtroom here in the small hours today and heard the death penalty meted out to him without a flicker of emotion. The jury was out two hours, receiving the case at midnight.

He made no comment on the decree that will send him to the electric chair as officers hurried him from the courthouse into a waiting automobile and hurried him out of town. Hassel will be kept in jail for possibly sixty days before his transfer to Huntsville penitentiary to await execution.

Feeling against the slayer has died down here and officers are expecting no trouble.

PUBLIC CRITICISM.

Should Americans criticise their government?

Particularly, should they criticise their government's conduct of foreign affairs? Recent events connected with Mexico and Nicaragua have made this a live question. It was also a very live question a few years ago, when the Versailles treaty was being negotiated and the League of Nations planned.

All administrations object, in greater or less degree, to criticism. The more vital they consider their policies, the more they object.

It is unquestionably more comfortable for a President or a Secretary of State to pursue the course dictated by his own judgment, without a word of remonstrance from Congress or press or public. But suppose people honestly think he is making a mistake—is nothing to be said then? Shall legislator and editor and private citizen be silent if they cannot voice approval?

On the whole, history, and especially American history, seems to show that the inconvenience resulting from criticism is likely to be less than the inconvenience resulting from government behind closed doors. Anyway, Americans like to speak their minds, and will probably continue to do so hereafter as they have done in the past, even if they do seem occasionally to make unnecessary trouble for public men.

PEACE PRIZE WELL USED.

The prize of $25,000 awarded to Elihu Root by the Woodrow Wilson Foundation is recognition of his distinguished service in aiding the establishment of the World Court has been turned over by him to the Council of Foreign Relations. The money will be used as an endowment in support of the quarterly review known as Foreign Affairs.

This publication and the organization back of it are operating not for profit, but for the dissemination of general information upon international affairs. The magazine, too little known in the country so far, is ably edited, avoiding narrow partisanship and turning its attention to general problems of statecraft. Its editors seek to discover and to present honestly and fully the basic facts of international dealings.

This, as many persons believe, including Elihu Root, is one of the best ways to serve the cause of peace. If the prize money is instrumental in bringing the truth about foreign affairs to the thoughtful attention of more men and women, it will be a prize well spent as it was well won.

Congress is asked to sanction a great international highway from Canada right down through the United States, Mexico and Central America. Better ask Mexico and Nicaragua.

What Other Editors Say

PROFIT IN CHRISTMAS TREES.

"The growing of timber as a crop is being widely advocated, but there is particular merit in the suggestion of State Forester Dunlap that Missouri grow a crop of Christmas trees. 'Missourians,' he says, 'are spending each year in the neighborhood of $500,000 for their Christmas trees. In Eastern States farmers are finding the trees a profitable crop.'

"In some localities of the state the evergreens that may be transformed into Christmas trees by ornaments and tinsel are rather abundant. About sixty miles south of St. Louis may be found a region where thousands of them mingle with oak timber along rocky slopes, presenting an odd, if not a weird, picture. But the young trees, small enough to be taken inside and covered with Yuletide trinkets are not so numerous as those that have grown too large for such use. As great numbers of young trees are cut annually, the time may come when a crop of this sort would be profitable.

The discouraging feature of this agricultural sideline is that the crop is not harvested until eight years after the first planting. Then only the largest trees would be cut, leaving others to brighten future Christmases. However, if the people of Missouri are now paying $500,000 for their Christmas trees, they may be paying $1,000,000 or more for the same number eight years hence, and the evergreens on a small plot of ground might go far toward defraying the expenses of the Christmas season and other seasons for the planter. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER.
NEA Service Writer.

Washington.—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee's decision to question Secretary of State Kellogg regarding his Nicaraguan and Mexican policies recalls that the House Foreign Affairs Committee also, in its much smaller voice, has undertaken to tell the State Department where it gets off.

After Major Robert W. Imbrie had been murdered by a mob of Persian fanatics at Teheran in 1924, the Persian government agreed to compensate Mrs. Katherine G. Imbrie, his widow, with $60,000 and to pay the United States $110,000 to cover expenses of a warship to bring the body home and otherwise to settle the American claim.

Thereupon a minor official of the State Department decided that it would be a mighty fine gesture to spend the $110,000 on education of Persian students in the United States.

But the $110,000 was paid into the United States treasury. The State Department, despite the plans made for disposition of this money by a minor official, was unable to touch it.

Congress is the only body which can appropriate money from the treasury and the House promptly made it known that it was not up to the State Department to spend the $110,000.

Mrs. Imbrie lives in New Bedford, Mass., and her congressman, Charles L. Gifford, raised the claim that inasmuch as Persians had attacked and insulted her while she mourned her husband's loss, she should be more adequately compensated.

Gifford's first bill, which would have given the whole $110,000 to Mrs. Imbrie, was assigned to the Foreign Affairs Committee, which voted to give Mrs. Imbrie $25,000 and the rest to the students. This was a compromise measure, the opposition having held that the government's word, even if given only by some under-secretary, should be kept.

In any event, Mrs. Imbrie probably will be given some more money and the State Department taught its lesson.

Put your trust in rouge, girls, but keep your powder dry.

The next thing Judge Landis is going to be told is that ball players in the good old days often wore sidewhiskers and mustaches. Maybe they were disguises!

The beauty doctors, having bobbed the world's hair, now want to let it grow again, saying the modern girl's head often looks like a mop. Well, she certainly never looks at one.

Movies May Soon Be Sent by Radio

New Television Process Will Be Used; Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson Demonstrates Method To Engineers.

New York, Jan. 12.—Moving pictures in the home, broadcast by the new television process as musical programs are now being sent by radio to every corner of the land, were envisioned in a discussion of the latest development in the experiments in television being made by Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson.

Dr. Alexanderson, consulting engineer of the General Electric company, and the Radio Corporation of America, demonstrated before a group of radio engineers here in convention the operation of an apparatus which he admitted was crude but through the development of which he hopes to broadcast pictures.

About all that the engineers saw on the screen before them was seven white spots and they had to imagine that some day not too far in the future these white spots of light, multiplied 24 times, would cover the entire screen and by graduation of light and shadow, produce a picture.

Most of those present seemed to think Dr. Alexanderson's idea was not far-fetched. There was, however, one among them who caused considerable embarrassment by rising in his seat and bluntly charging the inventor with exploiting a half-formed theory for publicity purposes for the companies he represented.

The dissenter was William Lufton, former United States naval commander.

The majority of the engineers thought Lufton's attack was unfair to Dr. Alexanderson and one of them said an apology was due, but none was given by the former navy man.

Brookfield Hunter Gets White Mallard

Brookfield, Mo., Jan. 12.—Clippings from papers in Canada and elsewhere, including several Pacific coast papers, and private letters have been sent to A. T. Kern here, inquiring about the Albino Mallard killed near here last month.

The news of the killing of the white mallard brings an interesting letter from Saskatchewan which tells that Reuben Lloyd who is trying to raise white mallards branded several of the birds and let them loose.

He since has heard from four of them. One was killed in a swamp near New Orleans, another in South America, one in California and one in Texas. He is of the opinion that the bird killed here was one of his but there was no metal tag on the Mallard shot down by Kern so it could not be identified.

HOW TO GIVE "TEA FOR TWO"

---by a Bride

NEVER invite a man to tea unless you are prepared to make a good impression.

And that'll require plenty of sandwiches and cakes—for a real he-man consumes more parlor food in an afternoon than you'd eat in a week.

And be sure to have plenty of knives and forks and spoons—for he'll drop whatever piece of silver you have least of... I've never known it to fail.

But most important, your silver should be the very best looking pattern you can find.

Speaking of Good-Looking things, you'd better drop into our shop and see the beautiful new silver and jewelry we have.

HAS BILL TO CUT SALARIES

SENATOR WHITECOTTON SEEKS RETURN TO OLD SCALE.

A SCHOOL BILL ALSO

Two Years of Junior College Proposed for High Schools of the State.

Moberly, Mo., Jan. 12.—A bill designed to place the salaries of certain county officers on their former basis, has been prepared and will be submitted to the Missouri legislature this week by Senator James H. Whitecotton, of this district.

The bill affects prosecuting attorneys and other county officers whose salaries were increased under a special session act, placing the salary on a basis of voting strength, which was in some instances doubled when suffrage became effective.

Senator Whitecotton will introduce his school bill today. Under the terms of this bill, two years junior college courses would be offered in various high schools in the state.

"In the salary bill," said the senator, "the salaries of all county officers increased under the special session act would be placed on their former basis."

Senator Whitecotton has several other bills that he plans to present within a few days.

"Missionary in China May Never Come Out"

Impossible to Predict What Will Happen, Says Father Lawrence—Poverty Indescribable.

"If a missionary goes into China, he runs a good chance of never coming out," says the Rev. Father Lawrence, former pastor of St. Mary's Church here, now at Conception Abbey.

The political conditions in China are such that it is impossible to predict what may happen, the Rev. Father Lawrence is quoted as saying in the Morning Star, publication of Conception College.

Father Lawrence recently returned from China after making a survey of prospects for Christian education there.

The extreme poverty of the Chinese people, he said, is indescribable to anyone who has not observed it. Of the field for missionary work, he said comparatively little impression has yet been made, due to the insufficient number of missionaries.

"There is nothing wrong with the Gospels. It is for the Chinese just the same as it is for us," he declared.

To initiate a Benedictine institution in China, Father Lawrence said, would require three other men besides himself. Having sized up the situation, he is waiting for the call, and if it comes, he is ready to go.

Priest Sons Visit Conception Mothers

A number of mothers in Conception had no reason to be jealous of one another, for each enjoyed the same privilege in having their priest sons home for a few days during the festive holidays. At the home of Mrs. Lehman were the four stalwart boys whom she may term her priestly sons. Father Sylvester, O. S. B. did not have far to go. Father Anthony came in from Chester, Ill. Father Alphonse hailed from West Point, Neb., and Father Ignatius stepped off of the northbound train steaming in from Tipton, Mo. Father George Germain from Des Moines, Iowa, and Father Leo Ruggle from St. Joseph, Mo., also spent a few days at their homes. Father Lawrence and Father Stphen being at the abbey could also step across the block to make Christmas happy for their mothers.—The Morning Star.

This and That

Dr. Rockwell, headliner at the Orpheum Theater in Kansas City this week, and a radio entertainer, is running a "Spinal column" in the Journal-Post. Dr. Rockwell also is the sponsor of the laugh club. Among his questions and answers are:

Dear doctor—Why do sausages have skins? Are you married? How old is your wife and how many children have you?

Answer—I am glad my reader is so frank. Houston is the capital of Texas. Now I'll ask you one: Why do they call Escanaba Escanaba?

Dear doctor—What is good for whisky breath?

Answer—Whisky breath is good enough, I shouldn't think you'd want to improve it.

Dear doctor—What shall I do? Every girl I go out with tells me she is saving all her kisses until she's married.

Answer—Go out with one who is already married.

Dear doctor—I want my little boy to quit smoking cigarets. Should I offer him a penny to make him stop?

Answer—Make it a nickel, then he can buy a cigar.

Dear doctor—What is a hpyochondriae? Is life worth living?

Answer—It depends on the liver. A hypochondriae is a fellow who feels better when he feels worse.

Dear doctor—I have to meet a great number of people. What shall I do about shaking hands?

Answer—Quit smoking.

Dear doctor—My boy friend embarrasses me terribly. Last night at a dance his handkerchief hung out of his hip pocket all night.

Answer—You wouldn't need to have been embarrassed. Most likely it wasn't his handkerchief; it probably was his shirt.

Dear doctor—Are tomatoes fruit? Answer yes or no.

Answer—Yes or no.

Dear doctor—What becomes of all the love triangles I read about in the papers?

Answer—They usually turn into wrecktangles.

Memphis—Citizens here are considering plans for the building of an auditorium and gymnasium for the high school.

(This is the seventh of a series of articles on his daily life and work by Benito Mussolini, as told to Thomas B. Morgan, Rome manager of the United Press. Each article in this series has been personally revised, corrected and approved by Premier Mussolini.)

The problem of nourishment is one which the indivíual must solve for himself. Experience has taught me just what and how much I should eat. I know the penalty of over-eating. We pay for it in lack of vigor, reduction of energy and in wear and tear of the body cells. It may carry with it, too, a multitude of ills, beginning with indigestion and including some of the most troublesome of ailments.

Modern man eats too much. In general he takes little thought of the changed conditions of life resulting from modern civilization. He indulges as a primitive man would if the latter were transplanted from his primitive habitat to the abundance of a modern table. The needs of primitive man were physical. Much of the work of today is brain work and machinery has greatly reduced the demands on the physical body. The changed habits of life to meet our ever-changing civilization must, in turn, be met by a changed diet to respond to the needs which the changed conditions impose. We cannot gorge primitively and work modernly any more than we can work primitively and eat what modern man should.

In my own problem of diet, I have been guided largely by what experience has taught me. I am not a physician and do not give out rules of general application by which everyone should be guided. I have studied my own particular case and I now what foods agree with me and give me the greatest net results in health and productivity. I am not an expert on nutrition. I do not know the intricacies of the chemical and physiological reaction, but I do now the general effects of the various foods, especially on myself. It is therefore in the light of this experience that I discipline my eating that it may serve me to the enhancement of my mental and physical faculties, rather than that I should serve it at the painful cost of ailment and lethargy.

He Eats for the Nerves.

We have advanced so far that we can choose our food with reference to our needs. The brain-worker's needs differ from those of the manual worker. The former requires nerve nourishment; the latter, muscle sustenance. The brain-worker can defeat the ends for which he eats by unwise choices and large quantities. The stomach must not be overtaxed. The blood rushes to those parts of the body where work is being done. If hard work is required of the stomach, it requisitions the blood in this extra effort. The brain is then left impoverished and operates only with partial efficiency until it, in turn, can muster sufficient blood to meet the particular requirement.

I therefore seek a diet making but small demands on the physique but permitting generous assistance to the nervous system and the brain. To begin with, I deny myself coffee and wine. Coffee is never served me at any meal. I perfectely agree with those who regard it as a drug. It is a stimulant compelling by its action a useless nervous effort result, and is no concrete good either for the system or in aiding productivity. Even at breakfast, I will not allow myself coffee. It is never served me after dinner. My lone glass of milk in the morning is the perpetual and changless breakfast.

My big meal comes at two. It is big in proportion to my other meals but a mere snack compared with the lavish array of fancy courses served in the ordinary home of high estate. I take but one dish and that dish is composed of the simplest possible ingredients. The cooking is simple,—there are no sauces, gravies, dressings or other elaborate fixings. There is a small piece of meat, plain roasted or fried, or a small piece of fish, boiled or fried. There are green vegetables,—either some spinach, peas, green beans or clery, simply boiled in water, never dressed in a fancy way nor splattered with butter. The simpler this food is cooked the better it conserves its nourishment. There is never a dessert. After the one dish, I may take an apple or a pear but nothing more.

Cook Makes Own Menu.

Cesira, my cook, who is the only servant I have and who performs the manifold functions of maid, waitress and those of any other domestic, knows how simple everything has to be. She never attempts to show her culinary skill by producing elaborate dishes, choosing rather to subordinate her art to the stern desires of her master. She never discusses the dishes with me. She never inquires what I would like. She makes her own menu from the very limited range of meat, fish and vegetables which I have decided render me the most nourishment for my particular organism.

The one dish contains enough to keep me at my task in the best condition. I eat more fish than meat. It is a great nerve food. It does not tax digestion nor impede my engery. I insist on being ready for work at all times. Frugality of diet is absolutely necessary for the maintenance of an alert and responsive spirit. Big meals can only retard the physical and mental processes. Big meals with their attendant physiological reactions are only conducive to inactive and dullness.

I consider our great Italian dishes, such as macaroni, ravioli, spaghetti, etc. very toothsome. Our entire Italian cuisine is delicious, but, like all the others, it must be indulged in with due regard to conditions. Macaroni is an excellent food and food which I really enjoy, but it is not especialy adapted for me. Macaroni is a great muscle builder. It has proven its worth as one of the chief foods of a vast part of our population engaged in the heavy physical toil of the fields and workshops.

Milk is one of my principal foods. I take four glasses daily. One at breakfast, another at two, one at six, while in the Palazzo Chigi at work, and the last at ten o'clock at night. The nutriment in milk is too well known to allow of comment? From the infant to the aged, it serves mankind, offering him practically all he needs in his daily grind. It is a food almost sufficient for any eventuality.

For the great mass of our people, bread is still "the staff of life." It is the one food upon which millions and millions of them depend almost entirely for their existence. It provides the manual worker with the fuel necessary for his arduous physical tasks. For the brain worker, it is not so efficious and should therefore be eaten in moderate quantities. I eat bread sparingly, finding that it requires prolonged physical effort to work off, while at the same time, it does not enhance the active functioning of the organs of mental labor, on which the great bulk of my work depends.

Italian Bread Standardized.

We have succeeded in improving our bread in Italy at a great saving in the cost. We were faced with the problem of importing a large part of our wheat from abroad and set out scientifically to find a bread which would serve the needs of our peopde and, at the same time, solve the question of Italy's limited pocketbook. The bread we eat now is of a standard quality. There is not one kind for the workingman, and another kind for the rich. Fancy bread has been abolished. The new bread is made of coarser flour and is very nutritious. It is brown in color, resembling the whole wheat breads of America. The white breads were of too fine a texture. Our new bread is compatible both with digestion and with the functions of the intestines to a much greater degree than the fine white bread, which sometimes caused prolonged ailments very difficult to diagnose.

Our new bread has been received by all classes of the people with great enthusiasm and never has a suggestion been made to return to the fine bread, nor even a proposal advanced to allow the making of white bread in special cases, such as in the hotels, where a large number of tourists flock every year. Our new bread is just as popular with the tourists as amongst our people.

My lunch at two being my principal meal, what I eat in the evening can hardly be called a meal. At ten o'clock after all the work is done, I sit at table. Cesira has served me a glass of milk and dish of fruit. I take an apple or a pear and drink the milk and the day's feasting is at an end.

With this sparing diet, the brain is kept clear and healthy and is nourished in proportion to its needs; the body is not taxed with excess food, harassed by putrefying poisons nor overburdened with accumulating fat. My one hour daily of violent physical exercise works off any surplus before it has had a chance to show itself. Daily the routine of diet and exercise has so disciplined my system that it calls for simple rations and no more. My hunger craves only that which I allow it to crave. All my organs, responding to the daily cycle I have devised, perform their functions with clock-like regularity. The mastery of the physical is attained by the unrelenting practice of sound habit.

In the next article by Premier Mussolini to appear in tomorrow's Democart-Forum and Tribune, he tells of the value of silence. He describes the voluminous speech-making which was so much a part of Italian political life before his regime and the scant attention devoted to talk at present.

The Web of Fear

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

Through a plot engineered by James Mulholland and five aides, Ames, Chester, Quantrill, Fenne and Vereker, Robert Masterton, accused of selling government secrets, is sentenced to 12 years hard labor in Atlanta prison. His millionaire grandfather is the only one who believes him innocent. A beautiful and wealthy young woman, Cynthia Knowles, is greatly affected by the verdict. The plotters think they are perfectly safe with Masterton behind the bars. Vereker is arrested and sentenced to three years in Atlanta. Cynthia confesses to Mulholland that her love for Masterton is dead and her life is ruined. She agrees to marry Mulholland. Masterton's grandfather dies and leaves him six million dollars. Fenne demands money from Mulholland who brutally thrusts him aside. A few hours after Cynthia is married she receives a note accusing Mulholland of engineering Masterton's conviction. Mulholland cannot convince her of his innocence, and she locks him out of her room. Vereker, dying in prison, offers proofs to free Masterton. He ask's Masterton's forgiveness and receives it after giving him the names of the conspirators. Masterton solemnly promises that he will not invoke the law but will take vengeance into his own hands. Back in New York Masterton befriends Sadie Hicks, hungry and looking for a job, and accidentally learns from her that Cynthia has married Mulholland. He gives Sadie a job as his secretary and declines an offer to take up his old duties. He sees Mulholland, Quantrill, Ames and Chester dining at the Ritz, greets them as though they were friends and walks over to Cynthia who is dining in another part of the room. He drives home with her. She tries to atone for her lack of faith in him. He tells her she is the only woman he will ever love. Mulholland joins them and learns that Cynthia has told Masterton of the anonymous accusation.

"Look here," said Fenne, "you've got me scared. I'm ready to squeal."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER 14.

An Offer Declined

Now that Masterton and Mulholland were alone, there was a tension in the atmosphere that could be felt. Masterton's face seemed carved in granite, Mulholland was watchful and anxious. For the first time in his life he was secretly afraid.

"When I came in, Robert," he said grimly, "I overheard you say you had no proofs. As man to man I have told you that this charge is a monstrous falsehood." He walked up to Masterton and looked him in the eyes. "Do you accuse me?"

"No," said Masterton. "Not unless you accuse yourself."

There was a pause, Mulholland stared at him blankly.

"What do you mean by that?"

"You have made at least one inaccurate statement," said Robert, "that the accusation was only know to us. What do your three friends at the Ritz think of it? Are they at all uneasy?"

Mulholland seemed at a loss. He was scared, and baffled.

"I do not understand you," he said.

Masterton, instead of answering picked up his hat and gloves, and opened the door. He stopped for a moment on the threshold, and looked back.

"I am not responsible," he said, "for your understanding."

Masterton set off on foot. The street was deserted, for the hour was late. But as he crossed the roadway a shadow flitted out of a porch a little farther down and followed at a discreet distance when he turned into the next street.

Robert Masterton appeared to be unconscious of this, or of anything indeed except his own thoughts, which were quite sufficient to occupy him fully.

His visit to that house had confirmed beyond all appeal, the inexorable resolve he had made before leaving Atlanta.

After passing the next corner he turned abruptly and halted. The man who was dogging him came furtively round the angle of the street, almost on top of Masterton, who caught him by the arm with a grip of iron.

"Well met, Fenne," said Masterton, looking at the mean features and the small sharp eyes that peered into his. "I was expecting you."

Fenne did not attempt to reply, nor to free himself. He did not even seem to resent the grip on his arm.

"You complete the circle, Fenne," said Robert. "And yet it seems a little odd, doesn't it, to find you following me!"

"I don't mean you any harm, Mr. Masterton," replied Fenne.

Robert laughed. He walked steadily forward as he spoke, still holding Fenne's arm firmly. Suddenly he released it.

"You see, it is quite open to you to go away, if you wish," he said.

Fenne did not answer, but continued to trudge along at Masterton's side, like a man in a dream. And again Masterton laughed.

"You are more afraid to run than to stay?" he said. "Perhaps you are right."

At the next corner an empty taxi came by and Robert stopped it . . . . . Fenne was told to get in, and obeyed without a word. Robert gave his address to the chauffeur and they were driven away rapidly, still in silence.

"I am taking you to my quarters," said Robert. "I have a word or two to say before I have done with you."

They arrived at the House. Robert took Fenne up to his feat. The faithful Talbot was not on duty. He did not sleep on the premises, and Robert, letting himself in with a latchkey, led the way to the sitting room. There he turned on the lights, and took a good look at his guest.

"If you want a drink—and you look as if you did—you can help yourself," he said, lighting a cigarette.

Fenne shook his head.

"Perhaps you are wise. Sit down. Now—why were you following me. What is it you want?"

Fenne was scanning Masterton's face with a watchful, eager stare, as though his stout-like little eyes would bore through the coldly impassive mask of the man opposite him, and read his thoughts.

"Believe me, Mr. Masterton, I only want one thing," he said, "and I can make it worth your while. I want you to leave me alone!"

Masterton laid down his cigarette.

"Why should I?" he said quietly. "I was sentenced for twelve years . . . . unjustly. You would each of you get at least fifteen. They wouldn't differentiate much between you."

"I don't know what you're talking about," said Fenne slowly.

"Yes you do. No one knows better. Don't be childish, Fenne. I am quite tired of people telling me they don't understand me. Do you think it would come home to you if you had fifteen years to think it over in?"

Fenne continued to stare at Masterton. His face was now such a dead, waxen white, that it was curious any living man should look so like a corpse. He moistened his lips.

"Very well, Mr. Masterton," he said at last. I'm not a fool. Now I know, just the same as if I'd been there, that Vereker must have given more away to you than the papers ever told. And you think you can get Jim Mulholland fifteen years, do you?"

"I do not say so. It is not for you to assume what I am thinking, Fenne, or you will be apt to make a vital mistake. Your fate will be exactly on a level with that of your chief."

Fenne's body seemed to shrink into a smaller compass as he huddled in the big arm chair.

"I couldn't stand a stretch like that. I'd sooner die!"

"I have felt much the same about it myself," said Masterton.

"Look here, sir, you've got me scared, I own it. I'm ready to squeal. I'm only a spare hand—you don't want me. Now, you may get the chap you're after, sooner or later. I believe you'll make that good. But you can't get the full evidence, except from me. It would take you time—a long time. And you may never get it. You don't know what you're up against. You may guess, but you don't know!"

Masterton smiled at him, as, at some curious natural history specimen.

"Let us test that statement," he said. "Excluding Vereker—who is dead—there are five of you, Mulholland, Ames, Chester, Quantrill, and yourself, all equally concerned in the skilfully arranged coup which landed me in jail.

"Of these five, four are still loyal to each other, and I think likely to remain so. But there is one who, having conceived a grudge against Mulholland, first threatened him, then made an accusation against him in writing—unsigned. That one was yourself."

Fenne writhed. He looked at the floor, hesitated, then turned his eyes on Masterton again.

"That letter was unsigned, Mr. Masterton," he said. "Suppose I don't deny it? Suppose I put it all in writing—the whole story, together with the proofs? You're a rich man, but you've got me, so I'm not asking money. Just a couple of hundred—say one hundred—so I can get right out of the country? That's all I ask—that you'll let up on me; leave me alone. I know you, and I'll take your word. You've got me set, but you can't do without me, either. You'll never get it from the other crowd."

Masterton rose from his chair.

"Your offer is declined, Fenne."

Fenne started up.

"Don't say that, sir!" he said. "You're just as likely to go under as they are. You've got to have that evidence. I can give it to you at my room."

"You misread the situation. I have no use for your evidence."

He looked at Fenne with a feeling of physical nausea.

"Won't you come with me and let me show you?" Fenne persisted breathlessly. "Even you haven't any idea how much there is you don't know—how far it goes beyond anything you expected. It's worth your while . . . . I don't ask any money at all . . . I—I only want to be let out of it!"

Masterton paused.

"Where is this room of yours?" he asked.

"Just off Washington Square!" said Fenne eagerly, "not 15 minutes from here, sir."

Masterton opened the door, and took him by the arm with a vise-like grip.

"Come, Fenne," he said.

He marched him down the staircase, and out of the building into the silent street.

They'll Decide World's Biggest Tax Case

These three men will decide the world's biggest tax case—the effort of the Treasury Department to collect from Senator James Couzens of Michigan, certain heirs to the Dodge estate, and others nearly $50,000,000 as an additional tax assessment on the sale by them of Ford Motor Company stock in 1913. The entire history of the Ford Motor Company will probably be related at the hearings. The judges, left to right, are Ernest H. Van Fossen, John M. Sternhagen and John J. Marquette. Burlington Junction

(By J. Howard Thompson)

Miss Frieda Crouse, one of our teachers in the grades of our public schools, went to Mound City Friday to spend the week end with her parents, who live in that town. She returned to her school duties Sunday afternoon.

Burlington Junction was represented at the Governor's reception in Jefferson City Saturday night by Captain Lee Yaple. Mr. Yaple went by way of Kansas City Friday afternoon.

The change to colder weather Saturday night and Sunday had its effect on the attendance upon religious services in both churches Sunday morning and night. While two services were held in each church Sunday the audiences were small.

Should you want to talk to your friends on the Pacific Coast, just call for long distance and tell them about it and soon connections will be made for you. Or should you have business in London, just notify New York, that you would like to speak with King George on an important matter, you will soon be tuned in and the conversation will be carried on. As to the expense, it is not so much, only $175 a minute.

You will have noticed in Monday's issue of the Democrat-Forum an account of the burning of the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Manes in the north part of town. The home was completely destroyed, and the furniture in being removed from the burning building, was badly damaged and broken. Mr. and Mrs. Manes have the sympathy of the entire community.

The pews and furniture of the main auditorium of the Methodist church was removed into the completed rooms and the carpets taken up Monday morning and the scaffolding was put up preparatory to doing the work of repair in that room. The decorators are getting many compliments for their work in the rooms already finished.

The chorus of the Methodist church is giving tireless effort in getting ready for the cantata, to be given on Thursday night, February 10. The house will be crowded as it always is. Don't forget the date. You will want to hear this musical event, which will be the event of the season. Later announcements will tell more of the completed program.

My good friend, the Rev. W. C. Harper, the pastor of the Methodist church at Hopkins, was taken ill with the flu last Saturday night and was seized with a paroxysm of hiccoughing Sunday morning, which continued unabated until Wednesday, baffling the skill of his local physician. He was sent to the Methodist Hospital in St. Joseph. He now seems convalescent, and will return home the latter part of this week, unless some unforseen complications show up. The flu and its attendant complications is no respector of persons.

Albert Monk, one of the star basketball players for the High School team, met with a very painful accident in the game with Pickering last Friday night in the Armory when in some way he collided with another player with such force as to throw him to the floor, breaking his collar bone. He soon received surgical attention, and was made comfortable and is now doing very well under the circumstances. He will not be able to play again for some weeks.

The request has gone out from the president of the Parent Teachers' Association for any discarded clothing that could be remodeled or made over for some little child that may be underclothed. Should you have such clothing in your wardrobes just step to your phone and call Mrs. Nellie Houston, who is chairman of the committee in charge of such work. We hope there may be a good supply of it.

George Farrens, a bridge contractor of Braddyville, Ia., has been in the township doing some bridge work, and he with his crew just finished a fine piece of work five miles northwest of Burlington Junction. Monday he moved his tools and crew to Graham in the south part of the county, where he will put in a bridge in Hughes township.

In spite of the cold weather of Sunday that sent everybody shivering about their red hot stoves and furnaces, Monday morning appeared calm and warm for this time of year and everything is moving on again in a normal way.

The Rev. J. Howard and Mrs. Thompson were called to Oregon, Mo., Tuesday afternoon, on account of the very sudden death of Mr. Henry C. Cook, a very intimate friend of the family. They made the drive immediately after dinner, returning home the next day.

A genevous Providence has dealt kindly with Mr. and Mrs. James W. Miller, living four miles west of Burlington Junction. On December 31, they celebrated their 59th wedding anniversary, they having been married in Stark County, Ill., on December 31, 1867. Four years later or in 1871, they moved to Missouri, making the trip overland in covered wagons and settled near Burr Oak Grove, in Holt County. Here they lived for 18 months when they moved again to their present home four miles west of Burlington Junction, where they have since lived. They came when the country was new, and have witnessed the development of Add Burlington Junction ..... anet the country from its most primitive condition, to its present state of development. They were pioneers in every sense of the term.

Mr. Miller was 80 years of age last Sunday and Mrs. Miller will be 80 next September if she is permitted to live the year out. They are the parents of five children, all living save one, the oldest, a daughter, having grown to womanhood, and became Mrs. Myron Huston, and who died seventeen years ago. The living children are Philip, living in Elmo; Jesse, living in Dupree, S. D.; William H., who lives with his parents at the old homestead, and Mrs. John Dieus of Burlington Junction.

In addition to the children they have 15 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren. At their advanced age, Mr. Miller is quite feeble, and is beginning to feel that his race is almost run. Mrs. Miller, however, seems to be quite vigorous, and is able to do much work in the home. They are closely related to Mr. and Mrs. Enos Fast, who for many years live on an adjoining farm, where Mr. Fast continues to live since the death of his wife some few years ago. Mr. Miller is a brother of Mrs. Fast, and Mrs. Miller is a sister of Mr. Fast. Their experience is rare, as few live to celebrate their fifty-ninth wedding anniversary. The writer certainly congratulates them.

At the time this item is being written, Mr. Joseph Horning, living five miles northwest of town, lies very near death, and the end is momentarily expected. He had an attack of flue some few days ago, which rapidly developed into pneumonia, and he grew rapidly worst, until all hope of his getting better was abandoned. The attending physician did all anyone could do to save his life, but to no avail. His family have the sympathy of all in their grief.

No, this talk of the sale of Hornsby doesn't refer to any cattle deal as some folks might think.

School Notes.

At the regular monthly meeting of the board of education held last Tuesday evening, January 4, all the members were present except B. K. Lewis, who is recovering from a severe attack of influenza. FARMERS MAY HITCH UP WIND

AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT MAKES NEW DISCOVERIES.

WIND POWER PLANTS

Will Generate Sufficient Electricity For Rural Demand; 10-mile Per Hour Velocity Necessary.

Washington, Jan. 12.—Farmers may soon hitch up the wind to generate electricity, the agriculture department has predicted.

"The days seem not far distant when many rural homes will have wind power plants for generating electricity," the department said.

A scientific study of wind velocity has been made by the government to aid farmers in the march of progress. It was found that a velocity of 10 miles an hour is needed to charge batteries.

"Under average conditions five hours charging every two or three days is sufficient to keep the batteries in good condition," the department said. "In the tests, periods of several days without sufficient wind for charging batteries were not frequent."

More electricity is used on farms in winter when the nights are longer, during this period the wind power is stronger and sufficient to charge batteries.

Further studies of wind-power electricity for rural homes are to be made. The department said that there has been a growing demand for an economical and efficient power plant.

Closing prices were 1⅝ to 1⅞ cents higher than yesterday.

Offerings of corn were light and prices moved up with wheat but heavier offerings were encountered, with a lot of miscellaneous profit taking. This broke the market and prices were but ⅜ to ½ cent higher than the previous close. The cash market was steady.

Oats were barely steady, closing closing prices being unchanged to ⅜ cent higher than yesterday. The cash market was ½ cent lower.

Provisions closed steady to a little lower in an extremely dull market.

Here's Speedy Relief From Bunions and Soft Corns

All Druggists Say Emerald Oil Must Give Complete Satisfaction or Money Cheerfully Refunded.

Get a two-ounce bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) today. Every well stocked drug store has this, with the distinct understanding that your money will be cheerfully returned if it does not reduce the inflammation, soreness and pain much quicker than any remedy you ever used.

Your bunions may be so swollen and inflamed that you think you can't go another step. Your shoes may feel as if they are cutting right into the flesh. You feel sick all over with the pain and torture and pray for quick relief. What's to be done?

Two or three applications of Moone's Emerald Oil and in fifteen minutes the pain and soreness disappears. A few more applications at regular intervals and the swelling reduces.

And as for Soft Corns a few applications each night at bed time and they just seem to shrivel right up and scale off.

No matter how discouraged you have been with pads, shields, or other applications, if you have not tried Emerald Oil then you have something to learn.

It's a wonderful formula—this combination of essential oils with camphor and other antiseptics so marvelous that thousands of bottles are sold annually for reducing varicose or swollen veins.

Every good druggist guarantees Moone's Emerald Oil to end your foot troubles or money back.—Adv.

St. Joseph Seeks Tournament Now Held Here Each Spring

An effort is being made by David W. Hopkins, vice-principal of the St. Joseph Central High school to take the annual basketball tournament for class A high schools away from Maryville and sponsor it in St. Joseph instead. Giving as his reason for the move the claim that many Class A school of this district find it difficult to get to Maryville and complain that the expense of the trip is too great, Mr. Hopkins suggests that the teams play in St. Joseph, where larger crowds would insure a good revenue, from which expenses could be prorated.

Mr. Hopkins has sent a letter to athletic directors of all Class A schools in Northwest Missouri, urging the move. He suggests that the Class B tournament still be held in Maryville.

A new ruling in regard to the state basketball tournament in Columbia has prompted the move on the part of the St. Joseph authorities, according to close followers of high school basketball in Maryville. In the past the city champion of St. Joseph automatically was eligible to participate in the state tournament. This year, however, St. Louis was allowed to send its city champion instead, and no provisions was made for the St. Joseph title holder. That means that the St. Joseph schools must weather the Northwest Missouri tournament before they are eligible to play in the state meet.

College to Ignore It.

In commenting on the matter today, President Uel W. Lamkin of the State Teachers College, said that he had no objection to St. Joseph holding a tournament, but that the winner would not be certified to the state tournament. The College will invite all schools of the district to the tournament in Maryville March 11 and 12, and from the tournament here two teams will be certified to the state meet. Mr. Lamkin pointed out that it could not be done otherwise, because the board of control of the state high school association had ruled to that effect.

It is understood that there are some schools which favor the holding of the tournament in St. Joseph, but there are also many opposed to it. L. E. Ziegler, superintendent of the Maryville schools, and president of the Northwest Missouri High School Athletic Association, does not favor the move.

Following is the letter sent by Mr. Hopkins to the Maryville High School.

"No doubt you have seen the recent press dispatches on the manner of holding the coming State Basketball Tournament for 1927. The ruling of the board quoted therein states that there will be two teams from each of the eight districts outlined. The method of choosing these two teams is, I believe, left to the judgment of the district officials themselves. Ordinarily, of course, it would be the winner of the Class A Division and the winner of the Class B Division.

"Seriously Handicapped."

"The Class A schools of Northwest Missouri have always been seriously handicapped in attempting to attend the District Tournament at Maryville, Mo., because of the location, railroad facilities, and the great amount of expense entailed therein. The following schools have very rarely competed in this Class A division of the Northwest Missouri Tournament: Liberty, Carrollton, Richmond, Trenton, Excelsior Springs; Benton, Central, Lafayette, and Robidoux High Schools of St. Joseph. As there are only sixteen schools quoted in Class A of the Northwest Missouri District it is evident that the majority of these schools have not been competing in the Class A Division of the Maryville Tournament in the past.

"The new state High School Athletic Association has made some very great steps toward the betterment of Athletics in general in the state of Missouri and in order to keep the Class A schools of Northwest Missouri on a competing basis with the other Class A schools of the state it is desirable that a majority of these schools meet each year in a district tournament and send the best team to the state tournament at Columbia.

"Would it not be possible then to hold this Class A Tournament, including all schools of Northwest Missouri which have an enrollment of two hundred or more in the four years of high school work, in a more centrally located place, which can provide excellent railroad connections and draw much larger crowds from which expenses can be pro-rated? We believe that St. Joseph provides this centrally located place. The town is filled with patrons of basketball and large crowds would attend the finals. We believe without doubt that the money taken in would go a long way towards paying the expenses of the teams competing. There are five good gymnasiums in the city of St. Joseph which can be used, all of standard high school dimensions. In addition to this there are two courts of full collegiate dimensions which can be used for the finals. These courts are now used by the Hillyards, National A. A. U. Champions. A Consolation Tournament could be run which would guarantee that every team coming would compete in at least two games. Trophies for finalists, runners-up, and consolation finalists would be secured from St. Joseph merchants without cost.

"We hope you will give this matter your very earliest consideration and will write us at once, as this matter will have to be taken up before the officials of the Northwest Missouri Athletic Association and then to the State Board of Control of Missouri State Athletic Associations. If such a tournament is held it is suggested that the dates be March 11, and 12, which is just one week prior to the State Tournament at Columbia.

"Please let us hear from you at once.

"Yours very truly,
"David W. Hopkins.

"P. S.: Class B teams would go to Maryville."

BEARCATS TO OPEN SEASON

1927 COLLEGE QUINTET IN ACTION HERE TOMORROW NIGHT.

TARKIO IS OPPONENT

Quigley, Referee And Big League Umpire To Be Feature In Himself.—One-Way Traffic.

The State Teachers College Bearcats will open their home basketball season at 8 o'clock tomorrow night when they meet the Tarkio College five in the new College gymnasium.

This will be the first time this year that Maryville basketball fans will have an opportunity to see the much-talked-of team in action. Although the Tarkio team of the last two years has not been a serious threat, Coach Aubrey Pittinger claims to have a good working combination this year, and Coach H. Frank Lawrence of the College is looking for a close game.

As an attraction quite comparable to the game itself, the athletic director announced this morning that the game will be refereed by Ernest C. Quigley of St. Mary's, Kan., the dean of American officials. Mr. Quigley is in demand the year round in an officiating capacity. In the summer he is a regular National League baseball umpire, and in football and basketball seasons his time is full. He was the referee of the Stanford-Alabama football classic this year, and has been working most of the basketball games for the Hillyards of St. Joseph, national A. A. U., champions.

The game tomorrow night will mark the only appearance this year of a team belonging to the Missouri College Union. Mr. Lawrence is particularly anxious to win this game, as there is a tense rivalry between that conference and the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association, of which the College is a member.

It was announced at the College this morning that Fourth street past the gymnasium will have only one-way traffic tomorrow night and on each night when there is a game in progress. All cars will have to move westward, and there will be no parking on the left side of the street.

Another Win Scored by the Miller Bunch

Parnell-Ravenwood Aggregation Defeated at Hopkins Last Night by 37 to 17 Score.

The "Miller Bunch" of Hopkins, an aggregation of independent basketball players piled up a big score on a combination team of the Ravenwood and Parnell town teams at Hopkins last night 37 to 17.

While the Miller bunch was using the five man defense in the first quarter the teams fought on an even basis, with little scoring done on the part of either five.

The Hopkins players reverted to the old style of "covering each man" during the remainder of the game and went into the lead 16 to 5 at the end of the half.

Both quintets scored heavily in the third stanza but by a burst of speed the Hopkins basketeers doubled the count in the final period, by slashing the mesh for six field goals.

The line-ups:

Hopkins—	F.G.	F.T.
Baldwin, f	4	1
Davis, f	7	1
Turner, c	6	1
Pistole, g	0	0
Hall, g	0	0
Total	17	3

Opponents—	F.G.	F.T.
E. Cox, f	2	0
Bishop, f	1	1
Goodsen, c	5	0
Nelson, g	0	0
Powell, g	0	0
Total	8	1

Substitutions: Hopkins—Holker for Pistole. Ravenwood—Steiger for Bishop.

The Miller Bunch will play the Elmo town team at Elmo Friday.

Old Timer Remembers the "Good Old Days"

Bob McClanahan, 71, Misses Only Two Sessions Of Legislature In 48 Years.

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 12.—Bob McClanahan of Sullivan County, familiar face at the reading desk in the Missouri Legislature for many years, remembers a way back when room and board could be obtained for $3 a week.

McClanahan, who is 71 years old, has missed only two sessions during the 48 years he has been coming to Jefferson City. When the Democrats control McClanahan is always elected reading clerk and when the Republicans have the majority he is named an assistant reading clerk.

Commenting further on the price of room and board, McClanahan added that "the members of the Legislature lived at the old city hotel and paid $1 a day for room and board."

Tells of Seeing Former Nodaway Countians; Wants Home Paper.

Huntington Park, Cal., Jan. 5, 1927.

Editor Democrat-Forum:

We can't get along without the Democrat-Forum and are enclosing money for our renewal. We scan all pages, then we pass it on to some Maryville friends that come in and they too are glad to read it.

We are having some wonderful weather again. Doors open all day and then have a fire in the fireplace of mornings and evenings. We had one little cool spell, frosted for a few nights, but they think no damage has been done the citrus crop so far. We drop over to Englewood every week or so to see our good friends, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ray. Mr. Ray seems to be improving some and is in very good spirits. We never get lonesome out here. So many Maryville people out here and we see a lot of them most every day.

We have a Missouri picnic some time next month when we will see most all of them and we just have a good old Missouri chat with them all.

Los Angeles and surrounding towns are all building a lot so Los Angeles is sure to be a great city. Our little city Walnut Park has built up wonderfully since we came out here three years ago. Just a few houses then, now many houses. Lots are very valuable and also scarce. They can't build any apartment houses in the makes it fine for people that work make s it fine for people that work in the city.

Your friend,
Ed Otis.
